Emergent Curriculum with Infants & Toddlers

Register

Early

How can I plan to meet the individual developmental needs, abilities, and interests of the children in my care? This three hour workshop helps early learning and care professionals that work with infants and toddlers to identify interests and build a curriculum that is based on the expressed interests of the children in their care. This information takes a look at how the caregiver's relationship with the children is part of the curriculum and how to document and preserve evidence of growth of very young children.

The Emergent Curriculum workshop will provide participants with a number of concrete actions that will demonstrate how they will address and provide "evidence" to the following:

Develop Child Portfolios that gather information about individual child development and interests, (learn to create meaningful records & files as well as what to gather and collect).

How to reflect children's interests and abilities by implementing the emerging curriculum philosophy through program planning, (creating a process to record observations, and new ways of guiding and capturing program planning ideas).

Communicating what we are learning about children to families (Creating a living diary of children's progress- Translating what we know through creation of Documentation)

Fee: $40.00 PTL Program Member $60.00 Non-Member • Handouts relating to the workshop. • Course certificate for successful completion of the workshop.
